Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Statement

The Foundation focuses on where need exists and works to improve the wellbeing of individuals, families, and groups across our society. We do this by making grants to UK charities which support diverse groups and communities; this includes people who are experiencing discrimination due to their race, ethnicity, gender, gender identity, age, sexual orientation, disability and other forms of bias.

We are committed to inclusion in our society. We will continue to pursue this by finding more ways to overcome exclusion and disadvantage, reviewing our accessibility and being proactive. We include a broad range of factors which are important to our work and our understanding of the issues affecting society – these include lived-experience and social and economic background and we recognise that diversity is not always visible or immediately evident.

The Foundation has the following active principles and ways of working to support our ongoing commitment to diversity, equity and inclusion and will continue to embed these across all areas of our work, both our internal and external facing activities and in our wider relationships.

Principles:

- We are accessible and straightforward – giving clear and consistent guidance to applicants and grantees, helping them to present their best case regardless of background or ability.
- We maintain a transparent approach to our grant-making with grants published online on a regular basis, all grants listed individually in our annual report and case studies to visibly highlight the breadth of our support across the UK for those who may not have applied before.
- We strive to continuously learn and improve – we question and educate ourselves to be as well informed as possible about the issues and challenges that individuals and communities deal with on a daily basis. We continue to learn from our charity partners.
- We ensure our staff team is diverse throughout the organisation, including at senior and managerial level, to allow multiple perspectives to thrive and inform our work.
- We actively encourage debate and discussion so that wide ranging experiences and factors are taken into consideration when reviewing applications.

Actions we are taking:

- Staff and Trustees are committed to inclusion and discussion on DEI is continuous to ensure our commitment is embedded on a daily basis, not just as a set of written policies.
- We commissioned an external DEI consultancy to review all our documentation, correspondence and communication and continuously make improvements to be accessible and to account for new learning and standards as they emerge.
- We work with external specialists for staff and Board training to address unconscious bias and inform ourselves of key issues relating to our work.
- DEI is embedded in both our key documents and our practice, for example our Weston Charter which sets out our commitment to applicants.
- We ask applicants to supply demographic information about their beneficiaries so we can monitor the Foundation’s reach with marginalised communities.
- We ask applicants what patterns of inequality, exclusion, or marginalisation they have identified in the context of their work and what they are doing to tackle these. This helps us to understand how our charity partners are achieving diversity.
- We continue to monitor the diversity of our staff team. Half the team are the first generation in their families to attend university. A third of staff at managerial level are from a BAME background and, overall, this proportion is 38% across the whole team.
- We have appointed a DEI champion within the organisation who has knowledge and lived experience of DEI issues.
